TROPICAL MIX IN PANAMA

Degraded land, originally forest land, later used for extensive cattle ranching, is reforested with mostly native tree species and gradually converted into mixed forests. The project provides sustainable timber production and cocoa cultivation; it protects biodiversity and restores a healthy forest ecosystem. Sustainable forest management and cocoa production offer employment opportunities.

The Amazon's ecosystems play a critical role in stabilising the climate –providing food, water and vital medicines for all of us across the globe. The main goal of the project is to safeguard these resources from destruction. The Pacajaiproject owns and protects almost 150,000 ha –an area almost the size of London –of High Conservation Value rainforest in the Porte municipality in the region of Pará, Brazil.

WIND PROJECT IN GUJARAT, INDIA

The Wind Energy project was developed by VishWind Infrastructure LLP ("VWIL"), an independent power producer owned by the promoters of Wind World (India) Ltd. The project deploys 63 units of WTGs of Enercon technology, and delivers an annual average of 107 GWh of green electricity to the regional grid. It not only addresses the power demand–supply gap in the state of Gujarat, but also assists in sustainable growth, conservation of resources, and reduction of greenhouse gas emissions into the atmosphere.
